Woods Species & Surfaces

After selecting the perfect door style for your home, your choice of wood species and finish follows!

Each hardwood offers a wide range of stains, paints, and specialty finish options, shown on the following pages.

CHERRY

The warm elegance of Cherry darkens considerably as it ages. Cherry's fine grain often exhibits swirls and a flowing, random pattern. Its color varies from nearly white to dark reddish brown. Tucson shown in Cherry Tawny

HICKORY

Hickory displays vibrant grain patterns and wide variation in color. Lighter stains make this feature most evident, while darker stains tend to mute it. Lansing shown in Hickory Flagstone

RED OAK

A time-honored favorite with prominent, distinctive grain character, Red Oak may show tiny rays and flowing patterns. It tends toward warm tones and is very hard with a high shock resistance. Hillcrest shown in Red Oak Natural

WALNUT

Walnut has a variable grain, ranging from straight to highly-figured, with color, ranging from tan to dark brown to purplish-gray heartwood, and creamy white to blonde sapwood. A darker stain is recommended when less color variation is desired. Concordia shown in Walnut Natural

MAPLE

The fine, uniform grain pattern of Maple tends toward lighter colorations. Like all woods, it will darken with age, but to a lesser degree than Cherry. Maple takes on a subtle mottled appearance when finished in darker stains. Aireal shown in Maple Cashew

RUSTIC ALDER

Create an environment of authentic warmth and homey charm with Rustic Alder. Featuring Cherry-like grain, Rustic Alder displays visible knots, mineral streaks, and color variation in the door frames and solid center panels. Sierra shown in Rustic Alder Cashew

QUARTERSAWN WHITE OAK

The more costly quartersawing method yields material with distinctive grain and superior stability. Quartersawn White Oak is also very receptive to glazing, highlighting its unique grain. Cheshire shown in Quartersawn White Oak Montana

PAINT GRADE

Paint Grade doors have a solid, fine-grain hardwood frame. Center panels and slab headers are of HDM. HDM, an engineered wood, is more stable than solid hardwood and ideal for painted finishes. Boardwalk shown in Paint Grade Light Mocha

DISTRESSING

Distressing gives a timeworn look to cabinetry, reminiscent of antique furniture. The process creates soft corners and profiles, and subtle, randomly-placed dents. Optional glazing accentuates these features even more.

HANDCRAFTED GLAZING

Glazed finishes highlight detail and create an impression of aging at no additional charge. Glazing is an additional finish step in which a pigmented material is applied to the surfaces, then partially hand-wiped away. Glazing is evident in areas of detail, adding contrast and depth. Because of the handcrafted nature of glazing, it is naturally variable.
